

Synopsis

The teenage Galaxies start their routine by scoping out the Edge. Their parent calls them up for supper ("Crunch"). Singularity nurtures them and their tidal dogs, but a child is missing at this family gathering. JD is still looking out, tangentially wanting to go to the Edge. They see their legacy as apparent. However, Singularity speaks of its perils. Gravity fights to go outside and Singularity drags them to the doghouse. In the meantime, Triangulum outlines their family values. Eager for a voyage anyways, JD finds Singularity's Big Bang Taser stashed underneath the rug, and deems the Fabric of Spacetime to be just as sturdy. Later, Singularity assesses their children's black-hole hearts. With this being the final straw, JD strikes their parent with the Big Bang Taser. Singularity goes lifeless. In the chaos, Gravity discreetly picks up Singularity's dislodged eye. Then, JD flees with Gravity to the Edge, but the Edge keeps distancing. It is like a rolled-up rug that JD keeps rolling away ("Big Bang").

Triangulum decides to journey out to the Edge with Andromeda. They instruct Cartwheel and Whirlpool to babysit Milky Way. However, Cartwheel and Whirlpool heads out as well. Elsewhere, JD and Gravity are on an adventure. Soon, Cartwheel and Whirlpool decide to return home. They come to find that Milky Way. Isolated and alone, Milky Way speaks to their planetary friends. Eventually, Triangulum and Andromeda find Milky Way in an exhausted state. The Solar System has developed into a swelling. Despite Triangulum's objections, Andromeda comes to the aid of Milky Way. As a result, Milky Way becomes a Quasar. A trillion years pass, and JD and Gravity are still traversing space. They find time to play fetch, and Gravity catches on JD's fugue. Through a stellar speech, Gravity explains that the point of return is far-fetched. When retrieving a star, Gravity accidentally fetches over Singularity's eye. From the Center, Singularity awakens.

In the following act, Singularity's backstory is presented. Apparently, they ran away from their own Universe themselves. Presently, JD and Gravity discuss their lives. Soon, most siblings have clustered together. They intercept JD and Gravity, where they take them as captives. The Galaxies break JD's spirit and scope. Regardless, JD dreams to do what their parent did. Milky Way visits their cell to talk about their journey. Soon, they accidentally help JD and Gravity escape. After the dust settles, Singularity shows up to bring most of the Galaxies home.

An eternity passes, and JD is lost more than ever without their scope. They have hit a wall while looking for the Edge. Gravity believes that one can overcome by relaxing. In that spirit, the Edge unveils. Surrounded by spectacles that reminds them of family, JD decides to head back and take the Edge with them. Gravity feels betrayed as they fought hard for the wide-open space, only for it to be a singularity again. They run away and JD is left to return home alone. JD tries to give back Singularity's eye when they return. However, Singularity cannot forgive JD. JD jumps off the Ellipse. In these millennia of grief, the siblings hold each other close. Singularity takes in their eye, restoring their depth perception. Singularity looks beyond. JD sheds light in an Ellipse full of Galaxies.

All of a sudden in JD's honor, Gravity returns with a wolfpack. The Galaxies and the tidal forces end time in this epic showdown. When all is lost, Singularity and their Galaxies pray at their table in the Center of our Universe as the tidal forces consume them ("Big Crunch"). In the darkness, a bang is seen and heard again ("Big Bounce").
